High-end residential general contracting

Top-drawer quality and thoughtful management are two advantages clients note in evaluating this 30-year-old construction management and general contracting firm. Fort Hill is headquartered in Los Angeles, with offices in Boston and New York. Regardless of location, this family firm focuses mostly on residential work. Still overseen by original partners Jim Kweskin and George Peper, Fort Hill offers a range of services, including cost analysis prior to construction, project management, and permit expediting. The New York office takes on a select number of projects each year and is said to have a particular understanding of the challenges of remodeling Manhattan apartments.

Clients are awed by the museum-quality work and ceaseless attention to detail. A job supervisor stays on the job until work is completed, then Fort Hill's service department takes care of any small problems that might remain. Clients also say that the firm is professional and easy to work with; both attributes that have helped win the firm a star-studded client list.

“ They are a wonderful group- organized, detail-oriented. We had a great project manager on site.”
