Large scale, high-end renovation and new construction

From East Coast architects to studio back lots, Fort Hill is the contractor of choice. The firm helms tent-pole projects from custom new homes to historic restoration that range from minimalist to mammoth. The firm takes on a select number of projects each year, pairing with creative clientele and acclaimed design professionals who provide challenging, inspired opportunities. The A-list is awed by the museum-quality work and ceaseless attention to detail delivered by this 30-year-old construction management and general contracting firm. Fort Hill also maintains a drafting/minor design division to accommodate smaller projects and a service unit to care for existing customers. Headquartered in LA, Fort Hill is also firmly entrenched in Boston and New York. Angeleno efforts are centered in West LA to allow for sharing of resources and brain trust.

George Peper, Jim Kveskin and the other original patterns have cultivated a family business into a "factory" of "perfectionism." The Fort Hill family extends to ranks of craftsmen, supervisors and managers that run generations deep. A number of the city's high-end general contractors cut their teeth on the proving grounds of Fort Hill projects. We hear the firm's famously unflappable staff is reported to do very well to get even the biggest egos through a home's front door.

Undoubtedly the place to go for superior service, Fort Hill's cache comes with "take it or leave it bids." However, clients who sign on to the program love every minute.

"First line, all celebs." "Very attentive. Hard to find better." "They are a wonderful group-organized, detail oriented. We have a great project manager on site." "Everyone falls over dead when they see the numbers." "There's Fort Hill, and then there's everyone else." "A+++"
